

Introduction

The establishment of The Chinese University of Hong Kong, Shenzhen (CUHK-Shenzhen) is an initiative to extend core educational philosophy and values of The Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK), with an aim contribute to higher education across China and to groom future generations of university graduates, who are international in outlook, learned in the disciplines they follow, with upright character, and commitment to serving the needs of society. The University adopts a collegiate system for students whole-person education.

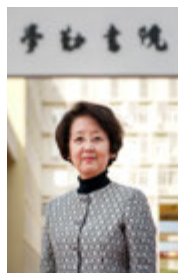

The collegiate system is dedicated to developing and refining an educational model that integrates education into personal growth and community life. Diligentia College was established in 2016, and it aspires to students' well-rounded development through non-formal education. A variety of co-curricular activities have been launched to strengthen students' physical and mental health, foster their sense of national identity, global vision, citizenship and social responsibility, enhance their leadership skills, and nurture their aesthetics and innovative spirit.

Why Shenzhen

The Greater Bay Area (GBA) encompasses two Special Administrative Regions (Hong Kong and Macau), as well as nine cities within China's Guangdong Province. The GBA's economic and industrial development serve as the cornerstones underpinning its overall development, providing the foundation to support the region's long-term and sustainable growth.
